The Legend, The Man & The Punjabi-Pathan: Kundan Lal Gujral

This is the story of a man who set out on a culinary adventure and changed the face of Indian Cooking. This is the story of a man and a recipe that revolutionized the Indian taste for succulence and spice in its food. This is the story of a man who made a butter-filled delight, bringing ordinary chicken a special flavor. A man who turned the plebian village tandoor in Peshawar for baking into a royal model for his innovation: The Tandoori Chicken.

Then came the Butter Chicken. The result was a revolution in taste, a change in Indian eating habits, and a place on the international gourmet map. The man was Kundan Lal Gujral. The restaurant where he housed his innovations was MotiMahal. The two became a legendary mix.

Kundan Lal's Innovative Genius

Kundan Lal is accredited with the creation of MotiMahal's iconic dishes: The Tandoori Chicken, The Butter Chicken, The Dal Makhani and The Chicken Pakora.

The Tandoori Chicken

Kundan won over the gastronomic hearts of the people and gave the world a new delight – “The Tandoori Chicken”. He roasted the chicken in the mud-tandoor dug into the ground lit with coal and wood and produced culinary magic.

James Traub, the author of “India: The Challenge of Change”, on a visit to India in 1984, described the tandoori chicken with typical gourmet flourish: “It emerges in the best of all possible restaurants, light pink in the centre, crisp on the outside, slightly smoky though out and with a fine mist of sauce still clinging to the surface. It is pungent, with cumin and coriander, rather than hot with chilli. One should give in, after the first bite of Tandoori Chicken, to the sudden desire to weep; India is an emotional country after all.”

The Butter Chicken

Notably, all of Kundan Lal's great ideas emerged out of necessity. When he began worrying about his cooked chickens drying out, he searched for a sauce with which he could rehydrate them. His solution was the "Makhani or Butter sauce" and it led to the creation of the – "Butter Chicken", made from bits of tandoori chicken that were in danger of drying out.

The Dal Makhani

Kundan Lal invented the Dal Makhani out of a desire to create a shahi dal to go with the rich non-vegetarian food. Kundan Lal took the black dal of his ancestors and added his Makhani sauce to it and, thus, after the invention of Butter Chicken came, his next invention was, essentially, the Butter Dal or the "Dal Makhani". Kundan intended The Butter Chicken and The Dal Makhani to be regarded as members of the same family of dishes. Once, Kundan added to his elegant menu a vegetarian specialty – "The Dal Makhani" – all Dilliwala's visited MotiMahal with mouth-watering expectancy.

The Chicken Pakora

Interestingly, one day a British dignitary visited MotiMahal with an Indian Cabinet Minister. The British dignitary asked Kundan Lal for fried chicken because he was craving his staple fish and chips from his home town in England. Kundan gracefully accepted the task and rushed into the kitchen. He took a "kadhai", and added boned chicken and poured oil till the chicken was submerged in it. He deep fried the chicken and served it to the British dignitary after sprinkling his secret spice blends over it. What he produced before the dignitary is what we, now, call the Chicken Pakora.
